

VETERAN WALKER WILL SPEND DAY IN CARLIN

Edward Payson Weston arrived at Carlin, Nev., at 11:10 o'clock last night and will spend Sunday there. He left Hallett at 11:30 o'clock Friday night, arrived at Elko at 8:25 Saturday morning, took breakfast there and continued on his way at 9:10. Hallett is 250 miles from Ogden. Mr. Weston left here at 1:10 o'clock Monday morning, and despite the extreme heat of the desert made exceptionally good time during his week's walk. At this rate he will doubtless be able to reach San Francisco in the one hundred days which he gave himself to walk from New York to the Golden Gate.

MRS. WOODILL'S JEWELS FOUND

the bungalow as late as 11 o'clock on Saturday night. There is no serious belief here that Eastman killed Mrs. Woodill through motives of robbery. Neither is there any widespread idea of premeditation. The two were heard to quarrel last Saturday afternoon. Attorney Rosen declared tonight that Eastman had known the murdered girl prior to her marriage to Woodill, and said he believed Eastman had visited her in California after her marriage. The girl knew much of Eastman's past life—knew him as an accused swindler and embezzler and a fugitive from justice—and the theory is advanced that in the course of their quarrelling the girl threatened to disclose the identity of the man who had taken the name of Roberts. There is the theory, too, that Mrs. Woodill had been longer in the east than either she or her husband intended because of her relation with Eastman, she decided at last to go away and see the man no more. The disclosure of this purpose may have led to her death in the bungalow. Eastman had been living more or less by his wife's aid, and there are many who believe that he borrowed considerable money from Mrs. Woodill. Being badly in need of money, it is believed that the idea of pawning the jewelry came to him when he felt that flight might be necessary. Mrs. Woodill's wedding ring is still unaccounted for. The rings and brooch located in a Baltimore pawnshop were identified positively by the dead girl's foster father and sister.

It was announced tonight that the authorities tomorrow will dig up the ground near the bungalow to investigate a strange odor which is becoming more and more apparent. The fact that Eastman had gone to Baltimore Tuesday was known prior to the discovery of the pawned jewelry. It was that day that he mailed the letter written some time previously by Mrs. Woodill to her foster sister. It is thought that the letter, which was intended to convey the impression that the writer was in Baltimore, was penned by Mrs. Woodill either to mask her visit to the bungalow, or else she had written the letter with the idea of actually going to Baltimore after meeting Eastman. The quarrelling of the two as they left the station Saturday, according to the witness, seemed to be over the refusal of the girl to go to some specific place with the man.

St. Michaels, Md., June 26.—The full text of "Lame Bob" Eastman's version of the death of Edith May Woodill, as related in the letter he sought to mail to Vinnie Bradcombe, his wife, has added a new interpretation to the tragedy. But robbery as a possible motive for the crime has now been advanced. Word comes from Baltimore that a man answering the description of Eastman pawned up the city on Tuesday last two diamond rings and a diamond brooch valued at about $500. Diamond rings, a diamond brooch and a diamond-set bracelet worn by Mrs. Woodill when last seen with Eastman have not been accounted for. Eastman went to Baltimore on Tuesday, and mailed from there a letter written by Mrs. Woodill several days previously to her sister at McDaniel.

Eastman's story of the crime, which he declared was committed by a drunken woman in a fit of jealousy, is so circumstantial, however, that Foreman Radcliffe of the coroner's jury which is inquiring into the death of Mrs. Woodill is convinced of its truth.

Mr. Radcliffe again today postponed the inquest to await some action by the law officers. The authorities are inclined to doubt the story in Eastman's declarations. They believe the last letter may have been written in an attempt to shield his wife and boy from a final and overwhelming stigma.

State's Attorney Turner declared that he will not abandon the investigation until he is convinced that every tangible clue has been followed to the end. The Baltimore police adhere to the theory that it was Eastman who committed the deed. Detective Captain Humphrey of Baltimore, in an interview today, explained his theory in detail. He believes, despite Eastman's declaration, that Mrs. Woodill was a new acquaintance, that the two were old friends, and that the woman was killed from motives of jealousy, when, after her husband's departure, she found her husband, she finally declared that she was going back to her home in Los Angeles.

Here, where Mrs. Woodill lived as a girl, the neighbors of her foster father and old Colonel Thompson himself hold the theory that the girl was killed in repulsing Eastman's advances. One of the clues yet to be run down is locating the men who were to visit Eastman's bungalow the night of June 16. A letter found in Eastman's bungalow, addressed to "Roberts," as he was known here, follows:

"Dear Bob—June 16—Dear Roberts—Ryan and Shotwell will arrive Oxford boat 12 o'clock tonight. Captain Lee will take us over to your point. Get there about 12:40, but must leave after looking the place over. Sorry you have decided not to go this time. Please all at Hallett when I am here as the one you sent for me. Yours,

"HOWARTH."

There may have been a party at the bungalow prior to the arrival of Mrs. Woodill on the 19th, and this fact may have given Eastman his idea for an explanation of the tragedy. Several persons along the road, it was learned today, heard Eastman and Mrs. Woodill quarrelling as they drove from Royal Oak station, where he met her Saturday last, to the wharf at McDaniel, where she was seen entering a motor boat with Eastman.

Baltimore, June 26.—Detective Captain Humphrey of the Baltimore police, who has been at work on the Woodill tragedy, scouted the idea today that a woman committed the murder. "From what I have discovered," he said, "I have no doubt that Eastman and Mrs. Woodill were old friends. I don't think it was a mere coincidence that brought him to live within a stone's throw of her foster father's home. I believe Eastman was in California recently, and that he had come to the eastern shore of Maryland, knowing Mrs. Woodill was soon coming east."

"Mrs. Woodill had intended returning west a few days after her husband left, but in my opinion, when she found Eastman domiciled near her father's home, she changed her mind. We know that Mrs. Woodill saw a great deal of Eastman. I believe, at last, Mr. Woodill informed Eastman that she intended to rejoin her husband, and that he became insanely jealous and forbade it."

"It is easy to conjecture that there were mutual threats. Mrs. Woodill had been told of much of Eastman's past life, and she could easily have threatened to disclose his identity to the authorities."

Captain Humphrey said it would be useless for him to send men to St. Michaels. "The man who committed the murder is dead," he declared, "so what is the use of sending men out simply to rake up scandal?"

A. S. Rosenthal, a New York lawyer, who says he represented Eastman at the time he was charged with grand larceny, passed through Baltimore today en route to St. Michaels. He says he cannot imagine where Eastman got the money to buy the property on the Eastern shore.

St. Michaels, Md., June 26.—Without ceremony, the body of Robert E. Eastman, "Lame Bob" of New York, stock broker, who murdered pretty May Edith Thompson Woodill, and then committed suicide, was buried at the expense of Talbot county.

The farm near Bozeman, where he had made his home, during his stay in this county and the bungalow where the murder took place, were sought for a burial ground, but permission was refused. No cemetery would permit the body to be buried within its graveyard, and the authorities were forced to bury the body in a hole in the ground on the farm of the man who had killed the girl.

The dead man was really "Lame Bob" Eastman, the fugitive New York broker, is now established beyond all doubt. Louis B. Pedler, an artist on a Washington newspaper, identified the body today. Pedler is a cousin of Vinnie Bradcombe, the New York actress, who, it turns out, is the wife of Eastman, and to whom he addressed the letter in which he charged that a woman had killed Mrs. Woodill. Pedler had known Eastman well in New York, and there was no hesitancy in his identification.

The story of the drunken row told by Eastman in his letter to his wife has caused speculation here, and efforts are being made today to locate members of a party of four or five people who are reported to have left here on a launch the day after the supposed time of Mrs. Woodill's murder.

The full text of the letter found on Eastman and addressed to Vinnie Bradcombe, his wife, giving his circumstantial version of the killing of Mrs. Woodill by another woman, was made public today. Eastman claims the murder was committed in the bungalow instead of in a launch as first supposed. The letter follows:

"Vinnie—Take this money and go at once to McDaniel, Talbot county, Maryland, and claim my body and all my property. The property consists of twenty-two acres of land and a bungalow. There is also a motor boat. Have a sale and move the whole thing into cash. I don't owe a cent except for the paint, pump, etc., which Shanahan & Wrighton, of Easton will be glad to get back, as it is not broken, just as it was shipped."

"Little girl, I had no hand in the tragedy. I was there and removed the evidence after the other two couples fled. I did this for self-preservation and am haunted. The victim was my particular friend and we were well-mated. Have only known her three weeks. We all, that is, two men and two other women from Annapolis, went to the bungalow for a time. Every one got full, excepting Edith and myself. Edith tried to win one of the girl's fellows, and was hit in the head with a full bottle of champagne, and the fellow hit once. She fell over on the floor and died. The man did not come to for an hour. I was left with the corpse and cannot take a chance for a trial. Life to me is very bitter and I will put down the shades and say good-bye. You can claim my property and say as little as possible, but get it. I am awful sorry for you and our boy, and I have been hustling madly to make your path clear, but fate is against me. (Signed) Bob."

"Take Pennsylvania route to Easton, Md., and then change to B. & A. Don't neglect this. The property is valuable."

BOY ROSE TO THE SITUATION

Quick Wit and Intelligence Displayed by Youngster.

His parents are convinced that Clarence will be a great man, the only doubt is whether it will be as a statesman or scientist. He is only four years old, and their confidence is based largely on one incident. The boy never told of it, and it would have been lost to history if a neighbor had not been a chance witness.

Clarence lives in the suburbs, and has a cat and kittens. One day he went into the yard next door with one of the little ones to play. There was a big pile of brushwood here, and he shoved his pet into a hole in this. She crawled so far back that all his efforts to get her out were vain.

Had been a man he would have pulled the pile of brush apart, but lacking strength for this he resorted to cunning. Running home, he soon returned with the mother cat. He shoved her into the hole after her offspring, and she soon came out with the little one between her teeth. Clarence bore them both home in triumph.

Antiquity of the Sausage.

The sausage dates back to the year 597. It has been asserted that the Greeks in the days of Homer manufactured sausages, but this prehistoric mixture had nothing in common with our modern product. The ancient so-called sausage was composed of the same materials which enter into the make-up of the boudin of the French-Canadian. The ancient sausage was enveloped in the stomachs of goats. Not until the tenth century did the sausage made of lashed pork become known. It was in or near the year 1500 that, thanks to the introduction into Germany of cinnamon and saffron, the sausages of Frankfurt and Strasbourg acquired a universal reputation.

REMODELING AT OPERA HOUSE PROGRESSING

Progress on the remodeling of the Grand Opera house is continuing with speed. The big circular sound board is now in place and the marlathing is being applied, ready for the plastering. The ornamental railing and barriers around the front of the balcony and boxes are in place and ready for the finishing plaster, metal lathe having been laid.

Against the back wall of the stage and connecting the two scenery lofts is a sixty-foot scene painters' bridge five feet in width and fitted with a high railing in anticipation of the early arrival of the scenic artists. A scene painting frame has also been made and hung upon weights and pulleys. Upon this the huge canvases will be stretched and raised and lowered while the artists create thereon the scenes to be depicted. The apparatus does away with the customary platforms and ladders, with which scenery is often painted, and will greatly facilitate the work.

The stage floor has been finished and the dressing rooms below are nearing completion.

BORN

Education in America.

Boardly speaking, the educational systems and institutions of the United States, public and private, enrolled in 1906-'07 in the neighborhood of 19,000,000 pupils of all grades and classes. About 20 per cent. of the total population attended the common schools for a longer or a shorter period. This percentage had been pretty nearly stationary for 30 years. In the meantime, however, the average length of the common school year had advanced from 130 days to a little over 150 days, and the percentage of those enrolled who were on the average in actual attendance each day of this longer school year had advanced from 62 per cent. to 70 per cent.—Report of the Commissioner of Education.

Humor There, Some.

Here is another story in the far east that is to Isham, the novelist:

Two Chinamen in Shanghai were discussing the president-elect's visit to that place shortly after the departure of the Taft party.

"Mr. Taft is certainly a very big man," said one, making a gesture that implied a large circle as he spoke.

"He is that," answered the other.

"We have certainly had a considerable sphere of American influence in our midst recently."

"And yet they say Chinamen have no sense of humor."

The Quaint Belluga.

Caviar can be made of the roe of any fish, but the principal supply comes from the sturgeon and the beluga. The latter is about the most curious fish in the world. It weighs up to 1,000 pounds and inhabits the waters of the swift-flowing Volga. It is so abundant that the natives of Astracan throw away the flesh—which is whiter than real and very dainty—and preserve only the spawn, of which they sometimes take as much as 200 pounds out of one fish. This belluga lies on the bottom of the river at certain seasons and swallows many large pebbles of great weight to ballast itself against the force of the stream; that is, the pebbles act as an anchor. When the flood subsides and the waters are less violent the belluga disgorges itself, that is, it unballs, hurls in its anchor and swims about for provender.

Farm Employment for Criminals.

Gov. Harris of Ohio believes that criminals can be employed on a farm with advantage to themselves and the state. He proposes that prisoners in the penitentiary who are not confirmed criminals be transferred to the reformatory and put to work on the state farm. "It is the conditions of our cities that breed crime," says the governor. "Most of it can be traced to idleness and drink, and idleness is frequently the cause of drink. There is little drink in the country and practically no idleness. If the young man who has slipped over the bounds of a law were taught scientific farming he would come to like it and escape the associates who carry him down when he returns to the city."

A Queen's Will.

Queen Adelaide, the wife of William IV., was a woman of great piety and exceptional humility, which was shown in the directions for her funeral. "I die in all humility," she wrote, "knowing well we are all alike before the throne of God, and request, therefore, that my mortal remains be conveyed to the grave without any pomp or ceremony. They are to be moved to St. George's chapel, Windsor, where I request to have a quiet funeral. I particularly desire not to be laid out in state, and the funeral to take place by daylight; no procession, the coffin to be carried by sailors to the chapel. I die in peace, and wish to be carried to the tomb in peace, and free from the vanities and the pomp of the world."—Home Notes.

Let your charitable gifts be anonymous gifts. These have the double advantage of suppressing at once ingratitude and abuse.—Alexander Dumas.

The New England Spirit.

In every crisis that has come to this country the "New England spirit" has risen to the top. It may have been dormant for a time, but whenever the necessity arose it manifested itself. In the great internecine struggle it predominated; in more recent times it has asserted itself. The pilgrim blood and the pilgrim spirit have overcome all difficulties. Without them the west would be a wilderness. The pioneers of the western states were actuated by the spirit that settled New England—Denver Republic.
